

ANDY ANDREWS

CONSERVATION PLANNER

Andy Andrews is a Conservation Planner with the Cecil Soil Conservation District. In this role, he assists farmers in addressing resource concerns on their land through the implementation of best management practices.

Andy began his career in agriculture in 1997 as an Ecoforestry/Organic Farming apprentice in Nova Scotia. He then spent the next several years working on farms in New Hampshire and New York. In 2003, he moved back to Maryland and started a Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) produce and pastured poultry operation in Galena that he managed for several years. Then in 2006, he moved on to manage another CSA farm that supplied 450 families with produce in the Philadelphia suburbs.

Andy started his own consulting and contracting business in 2014 that kept him busy until joining CSCD in 2021. In this business, he took on a broad diversity of jobs including consulting to small farms, community farms and a food hub operation, installing community gardens and operating equipment on large produce farms.

In his free time, Andy likes to spend time outdoors - fishing, hiking, biking and anything on the water with his wife Tanya, and family.
